“The most beautiful people in Baltimore come to see and be seen” at this Harbor East “knockout” from Charleston’s Tony Foreman, where “inspired Med tapas and entrees are served in a “dramatic” “renovated warehouse” featuring “soaring ceilings”, “sumptuous seating” and “stunning” “jewel-toned décor”; “well executed cocktails” augment the “killer vibe” P.S. the “valet is a plus.” Zagat - 2011

Best Restaurant

...PAZO gives Baltimore something it lacked: a dramatic see-and-be-seen venue for the Prada set. Indeed, we suspect many of PAZO's patrons are too busy enjoying the vast Tuscan-inflected space, the DJ-spun club tunes, and each other's clingy black outfits to notice how good the food is.

AOL City Guide - February 2007 & 2008
Best Date Spot...

Diners dwell among the building's original beams and columns, with a color scheme of red hues, Persian rugs and limestone floors. One of the two dining rooms is a communal area, and a mezzanine in the two-story nightspot offers the perfect people-watching perch.

Baltimore Style - The Style 100 - November 2006

...the only establishment in Baltimore that completely envelops you in mood, style and sexiness from the moment you enter. On planet Pazo, business people, couples celebrating anniversaries and young professionals are all rendered more glamorous by the Mediterranean-inspired palette, soft lighting and DJ music floating down from the balcony.

City Paper - "Best of Baltimore" September 2006
Best Tapas/Small Plates

...we still love Pazo. It's a rare little plate that comes out of its open kitchen that doesn't make us swoon a bit, right there in our luxe seats. Pazo made us eat beets and want more, OK? And not only does the expansive seasonal pan-Mediterranean menu inspire cavalier ordering, but the prices are reasonable enough that you can try a full spread and walk out full with bucks left for a nightcap or two.

Best New Restaurant

"It's pretty hard to talk, much less grouse, with your jaw on the floor. The place is gorgeous, with perfect interplay between bar, lounge, and dining room."

WHAT PEOPLE ARE SAYING ABOUT US...

Washington Post - Scene in the Distance By Tom Sietsema

"The latest downtown hot spot is hip, handsome -- and in Baltimore"

BALTIMORE SUN review by Elizabeth Large

"In city's newest hot spot, tapas menu overflows with rich, spicy pleasures..."

CITY PAPER review by Richard Gorelick

"It's an instantaneous and mammoth success, packed night after night with flatteringly lit, happy-to-be-here customers.

On weekends, lines form outside just to get into the bar. The tune I hear people whistling on their way out is this:

We needed some place like this.

Baltimore Magazine - WORD of the MONTH

PAZOESQUE /pa-zo-esk'/ adj. Possessing the qualities of the restaurant Pazo; i.e. a trendy, mood-evocative space that is 1) full of young go-getters downing tapas and of-the-moment cocktails and 2) impossible to get into on a Saturday night.

AOL City Guide - 2007 & 2008 - PAZO - BEST DATE SPOT

A machine shop/warehouse dating to the 1880s has been gutted and transformed into a fashionable restaurant/lounge. Diners dwell among the building's original beams and columns, with a color scheme of red hues, Persian rugs and limestone floors. One of the two dining rooms is a communal area, and a mezzanine in the two-story nightspot offers the perfect people watching perch. The peasant cuisine of Sicily, Sardinia and Campania is represented in small but filling portions...Wood-fired breads, artisan cheeses and Neapolitan pizzas round out the menu.

Baltimore Magazine - October 2006 - Diners Club Our 12 Favorite Restaurants

With its valuted ceiling and wrought-iron chandeliers, its two-story-tall curtains and its live DJ, here was the place that would make even a jaded Manhattanite adjust his or her hairdo upon entering.

Arrive Magazine - September/October 2006 - The Hedonist's Plate

With Pazo, Foreman & Wolf have converted an old machine shop into one of Baltimore's hottest dining destinations, creating an ambience that the world's foremost wine critic, Robert Parker, says evokes a "seaside restaurant in Barcelona or North Africa".

erobertparker.com - THE HEDONIST'S GAZETTE - Pazo - May 2006

...It is a strikingly beautiful venue which leads diners to think they are sitting in a seaside restaurant in Barcelona or North Africa...

All of the breads and pizza dough are baked in their own wood-fired oven. We finished with a stunning dish of woodfire grilled guinea hens with Spanish rice and chorizio. Pazo has a fabulously inexpensive, well thought out wine list, which is nothing more than I would expect from Tony Foreman, Baltimore's leading wine guru. Although I am not a vegetarian, those who are can eat exceptionally well at Pazo as there are many superb dishes based around vegetables. To reiterate, I loved this gorgeous, hip restaurant. It is an innovative, even revolutionary idea for a conservative town like Baltimore.

Zagat 2008 - Washington, DC / Baltimore Restaurants

"In a renovated factory on the fringes of Fells Point, this plush, romantic restaurant/lounge lures hipsters for rich Mediterranean small plates served in a soaring, multilevel setting featuring cozy, canopied booths, a mezzanine perfect for people-watching and an 18-person communal table; no matter where you're seated, settle back to the sounds of world music and sip from the well-priced wine list; N.B. on request they'll clear tables away to create a dance floor."
